Preventing sexual violence: Insights from the narratives of female and male survivors

Despite prevention efforts over more than 3 decades, the overall prevalence of sexual violence in Australia has not reduced. Would you like to find out how 10 women and men made sense of their experiences of sexual violence and how they then theorised its prevention? You are invited to hear Marg Rowntree present on the preliminary findings of her Masters research and to join in a discussion about their implications for prevention approaches.

Light refreshments are provided

Bookings on 8239 9600 are essential as places are limited.
